I find the book The List by Melanie Jacobson to be excellent at having an unexpected ending, it teaches you to never give up on achieving your goals, and it's very good at keeping your attention. However, there were areas in which the book was not quite as good, such as the attitude of one character and how she always butts in and ruins the perfect scene. I really liked the book and enjoyed ...

by Melanie Jacobson. Ashley Barrett doesn't want to get married. At least, not anytime soon. She doesn't care how many of her friends and family members and fellow churchgoers had weddings before they finished college -- the last thing she needs in her fun-loving twenties is the dead-weight of some guy. And that's why she created The List. By the time she completes all twenty-five goals ...

This summer in California is a prime time for Ashley to cross two items off the list: learn to surf (#13) and have a summer romance (#17). And Matt Gibson, the best surf instructor in Huntington Beach and the most wanted guy in the singles ward, is the perfect man for the job. Ashley hatches a plan to love him and leave him before heading off to grad school in the fall (#4,
